

Connectivity

In theory of graphs, intensity of interlinking between nodes through edges of a network; more generally, degree of internal connection of a network. As opposed to mere proximity relations, called relations in continuity, connectivity relations are those using the support of a network to link two places that may be far apart from each other.

Bibliographie

HYPERGEEO